

J.S. Bach - Church

Form: Chorus/Fantasia - Aria (T) - Recit/chorale (S) - Aria (B) - Recit/chorale (T)—duet (sop/aldo) - Chorale.
 The cantata is in chiastic form. Bach often used chiastic (x-shaped/symmetrical) forms, in which center movements
 (where the mirror image begins) provide the crux of the matter. There antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). Here the central movement is no. 4.

Bach uses alla breve meter motet style (brass doubling voices) apparently to pay tribute to the ancient roots of the underlying chorale (see note at no. 7). Compare his previous chorale fantasia in motet style, BWV 2/1 (2 S. after Trinity). In BWV 101, however, the instruments have independent material, divided into 3 choirs: woodwinds, strings, brass doubling voices. They are subservient to the voices, however.

Each chorale phrase is prepared by the lower voices in imitation (fugato), then the cantus firmus is sung by the soprano in long notes, doubled by the cornetto and by the flute at the upper octave.

Clashing, chromatic dissonances depict the judgment described in the text—an allusion to the destruction of Jerusalem prophesied by Jesus in the Gospel reading.

The movement contrasts the onslaught of enemies (understood as God's judgment and depicted by the violin obbligato's agitated 16th notes) with the expressive text setting of the singer. Robin Leaver sees it exactly opposite (violin=hope of grace; tenor=fear of law). See J. S. Bach. Oxford Composer Companions, ed. Malcolm Boyd (New York: Oxford University Press, 1999), p. 316. Helmuth Rilling interprets the obbligato as an attempt at frantic escape. See note.

The reference to being destroyed like Jerusalem alludes to Jesus words in the Gospel reading: "When [Jesus] drew near and saw the city he wept over it, saying, 'Would that even today you knew the things that make for peace! But now they are hid from your eyes. For the days shall come upon you, when your enemies will cast up a bank about you and surround you, and hem you in on every side, and dash you to the ground, you and your children within you, and they will not leave one stone upon another in you; because you did not know the time of your visitation'" (Luke 19:41-44).

Text painting: The ritornello's "flame" material ceases as the text pleads for punishment to be suspended. Instead the oboes play sighing/pleading figures.

The harmonized chorale is played by the instruments, the pervading motivic continuo line supplying the bass (and providing more subjective commentary). Petzoldt argues that the objectively rendered chorale represents God's grace. See Bach Kommentar 1:233). For a translation of this stanza, see note.

The reference to the devil as a roaring line is based on 1 Peter 5:8: "Be sober, be watchful. Your adversary the devil prowls around like a roaring lion, seeking some one to devour." Text painting: Unexpected modulation at the mention of deception by the world and the flesh.

The text here alludes to Jesus' words: "Enter by the narrow gate; for the gate is wide and the way is easy, that leads to destruction, and those who enter by it are many. For the gate is narrow and the way is hard, that leads to life, and those who find it are few" (Matthew 7:13-14).

Siciliano rhythm with woodwinds suggests the pastoral image of the Lamb of God (see below). Meredith Little and Natalie Jenne call the movement loure like. Again the objective quality of the chorale tune is married to a more modern element. See note for references.

The first musical phrase of the chorale, presumably implying the first text line of the sixth stanza ("Gedenk an Jesu bitter Tod") is always presented twice in succession. Because the librettist changed one word in the chorale line (see m. 12), the first line may be understood as a self-address rather than a prayer, following Jesus' exhortation in the Gospel reading (see below). The rest of the stanza is clearly addressed to God. Bach's pervasive double presentation of the chorale phrase suggests a picture of Christians exhorting each other (see Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:234–235). The duet structure supports this interpretation.

Martin Petzoldt suggests that the word "gedenk" ("think on" or "remember") parallels Jesus' use of "bedenk" ("consider") in the Gospel reading: "Wenn du es wüßtest, so würdest du auch bedenken zu dieser deiner Zeit, was zu deinem Frieden dient." (Luther 1545). ("If you knew, you would consider even in this your time what makes for your peace." See Bach Kommentar 1:230.)

For possible biblical allusions see note. The designation of Jesus as the Lamb of God may account for siciliano meter and rhythm.

Martin Petzoldt suggests that the quadruple presentation of the cantus firmus (3rd phrase) represents the four corners of the world, i.e., "die ganze Welt" ("the entire world." See Bach Kommentar 1:235.)

Dal Segno.

This is the 7th and final stanza of the 1584 chorale by Martin Moller (1547–1606), written during a plague. Moller based his verses on the Latin hymn "Aufer immensam, Deus, aufer iram," attributed to Geog Klee, also called Thimäus (d. 1561); attributed by others to Johann Spannberg (1484–1560), and corrected by Philipp Melanchthon (1497–1560). In hymns of Bach's day, the German chorale is attributed to Bartholomäus Ringwald (1530–1599). See Martin Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:228–229; Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 483.

101/7. Choral. (Verse 7) (See also 90/5.) • Prayer for blessing on city and nation and spiritual protection (101/7).

The tune is Luther's 1539 hymn paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer, so it suits the cantata's emphasis on prayer.

Many of Bach's settings of this tune are complex (see note).

The closing chorale stanza is a prayer that serves as a catechismal summary. Doubling the vocal lines with trombones is an old-fashioned technique and pays tribute to the ancient roots of the chorale.
